Claudia Alarcón & Silät

Choreography of the Imagination

22 May - 25 July 2025

Claudia Alarcón, Salir a alumbrar un mundo [Go out and bring light to the world], 2025, hand-spun chaguar fibre, woven in antique stitch

Cecilia Brunson Projects presents Choreography of the Imagination, an exhibition of hand-spun textiles by leading Indigenous collective Claudia Alarcón & Silät, following their acclaimed inclusion in the 60th Venice Biennale, curated by Adriano Pedrosa.

Founded in 2023 in Salta, Argentina, Silät is a collective of more than a hundred Wichí women weavers from the Alto la Sierra and La Puntana communities. Working with fibres from the native chaguar plant - a material with deep roots in Wichí culture - they create collaborative, fluid compositions that echo ancestral geometries and stories, and tie the weavers into dynamic imaginaries, connecting them to past generations.

This exhibition marks Alarcón & Silät's second presentation at the gallery and unveils a new body of work inspired by the textiles of Anni Albers. Albers, who encountered chaguar weavings during her travels in northwest Argentina in the mid-20th century, drew on these traditions to redefine textiles as a modern art form.

Alarcón, herself from the La Puntana Wichí community, leads Silät in collaboration with local curator Andrei Fernández. Together, they work to revitalise and reinterpret Wichí weaving practices - particularly ceremonial techniques such as the 'antique stitch', central to this exhibition - while fostering intergenerational dialogue, creative agency, and economic self-sufficiency among women facing the twin threats of cultural erasure and climate crisis.

The collective's work contributes to the rich lineage of geometric abstraction in South America and opens a nuanced dialogue with the legacy of Anni and Josef Albers, whose engagement with pre-Hispanic textiles informed their modernist experiments. Anni Albers held chaguar pieces in her personal collection and featured them in her seminal 1965 text On Weaving.

Alarcón & Silāt reflect on this exchange, not as a linear influence but as an evolving conversation - embracing the returns and reverberations of Indigenous visual language as a dynamic foundation for contemporary expression.

The exhibition coincides with the collective's first institutional solo show, titled Tayhin, at the De La Warr Pavilion in the UK (14 June – 14 September 2025).

About Cecilia Brunson Projects:

Founded in 2013, Cecilia Brunson Projects is the leading London gallery championing Latin American art. The gallery's specialist programme places overlooked historical voices in dialogue with burgeoning contemporary talent, often for the first time. Our mission is to platform exceptional Latin American artists across generations and increase awareness around their role in shaping global art movements.
